March presentation

The clad coin turns 50 this year. The sandwich composition is largely the work of Columbus' Battelle Memorial Institute. - Gerry Tebben

February presentation

Noted numismatic author Fred Schwan braved the bitter cold and snow to drive to Columbus to give a presentation on a fascinating aspect of coin collecting - numismatic trench art.

Trench art items, he said, are "souvenirs of conflict made from remnants of conflict. Think shell cases made into ashtrays."

Numismatic trench art adds a coin, medal or piece of paper money twist.

During World War I, he said, companies sold stencils that could be wrapped around artillery shells and used as a guide by soldiers to produce their own trench art.

During World War II, he said, Seabees (Naval Mobile Construction Battalions) were particularly adept at producing wartime souvenirs.

Schwan explained they had the time (at sea between construction projects), skills and tools to turn war's detritus into prized objects.

During his presentation, Schwan showed a variety of pieces of trench art including airplane models with coin propellers, ashtrays with coin cigarette holders and short snorters that logged a soldier's activities.

CSNS provided $150 for Schwan's expenses
